

Be Not Afraid

(What's the worst that could happen?)

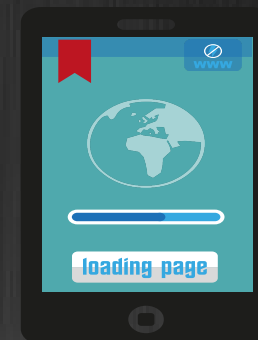

Yea, though I walk through the Silicon Valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no technology, for tech support art with me; thy IT staff, they comfort me
Psalm 23:4-ish

Of-peated quotes the IT department hears:

"My [grandson/nephew/neighbor's toddler next door] is just a whiz with this stuff."

"The students grew up with technology, so they really understand it."

"Some people seem to intuitively understand tech stuff. It comes naturally."

What do these people have in common?

That five year old next door who zips around on his iPad faster than seems possible? It's not that he was born with some innate technological know-how. He's just not afraid to press and prod and poke everything, just to see what happens.

This could be you.
This SHOULD be you.
So push that button. Poke that icon.
See what happens when you're not afraid.
